Provide a short bio (250 words or less) to be used in election materials or introductions.

Diego Miron has been part of the American Saddlebred community for nearly 20 years as an owner, breeder, and dedicated horse dad. His experience reflects long term involvement in ownership, breeding, and industry development, with a focus on building sustainable pathways for growth within the breed.

At his farm in Simpsonville, Kentucky, Diego has expanded into advanced breeding programs that promote responsible and affordable access to elite quality Saddlebred bloodlines through ICSI and embryo transfer technology. His approach enables new breeders and those with new and emerging breeding programs to participate in top level breeding while maintaining the highest standards of care and integrity.

Drawing on his global experience owning, breeding, and working with horses across North and South America and Europe, Diego brings a deep appreciation for collaboration and innovation in the equine industry. Professionally, he has built a career in global strategy, partnership development, cloud migration and modernization, and Artificial Intelligence leadership. His experience has shaped a belief that technology should always serve people supporting transparency, accessibility, and the long-term health of the Saddlebred industry.

Diego has also supported regional and national shows such as Ocala, Rock Creek, Shelbyville, and the All American Cup. His goal is to help ASHBA protect the traditions that define the Saddlebred while building new opportunities for breeders, owners, and youth to carry the breed forward for generations to come.

Horse Dad!

My greatest contributions to the American Saddlebred industry include (please list up to three statements):

1. Expanding responsible and affordable access to elite quality breeding through hands on use of ICSI and embryo transfer programs for my own mares and in support of other breeders. This work helps new breeders and those with new and emerging breeding programs engage in top level breeding while maintaining the highest standards of care and integrity.
2. Building partnerships that elevate the Saddlebred industry, such as connecting with Spy Coast Farm, a world class sport horse breeding and ICSI leader to bring new expertise, technology, and collaboration into the Saddlebred community.
3. Consistent sponsorship and show support, including Ocala (4 of 5 years), Rock Creek, KASPHA, Shelbyville, the All American Cup, and Shenandoah helping promote the breed across regions.
4. Advancing innovation and transparency through early Artificial Intelligence and data framework design work aimed at modernizing registry and lineage access for ASHBA members.

I want to be on the ASHBA Board of Directors because?

I believe the future of the American Saddlebred depends on protecting the traditions that define us while creating realistic pathways for sustainable growth. My goal is to bring a complementary perspective to the Board, grounded in nearly two decades as an owner, breeder, and sponsor, combined with professional experience in global strategy, alliance and partner development, Cloud migration and Modernization, and Artificial Intelligence.

I want to help ASHBA modernize where it matters most: breeding access, member engagement, and data transparency. I also aim to strengthen partnerships across equine organizations and disciplines to encourage collaboration, innovation, and shared success throughout the industry. I believe this can be achieved by working alongside breeders, trainers, and fellow members to translate ideas into practical programs and measurable results, while continuing to honor and preserve the heritage that makes this breed extraordinary.

What I would like to accomplish most for the breed is:

To help position the American Saddlebred as a leader in the broader equine industry by combining traditional horsemanship with innovation and collaboration. I want to strengthen foal crops, expand youth and newcomer participation, and modernize registry and information systems so every breeder, trainer, and owner has the tools to make confident, informed decisions.

I also see significant opportunity to build partnerships across the global equine industry, similar to my work connecting Spy Coast Farm to the Saddlebred community. By leveraging my professional background in global technology, AI, and alliance development, I can help bring forward resources, knowledge, and innovation that will advance the breed's growth and visibility worldwide. Having owned, bred, and had horses compete in multiple countries from South America to Europe, I understand the power of international collaboration and believe global partnerships can help position the Saddlebred breed as a recognized and admired breed on a broader stage.
