Provide a short bio (250 words or less) to be used in election materials or introductions.

Erin Eichenbaum is a lifelong advocate for the American Saddlebred and an accomplished equestrian whose passion for the breed continues to shape her volunteer and leadership work within the community. A highly decorated equitation and performance rider, Erin is one of only six amateurs to win the prestigious Three-Gaited World's Grand Championship aboard the legendary CH The Crowd Went Nuts!—a distinction that reflects both her deep horsemanship and her dedication to excellence in the show ring.

Today, Erin channels that same commitment into her service as a volunteer and active supporter of the American Saddlebred Horse & Breeders Association. She is deeply engaged in efforts to promote the breed, support fellow exhibitors, and ensure that the next generation of riders has access to the same opportunities that have meant so much to her.

Beyond her equestrian accomplishments, Erin is a devoted homemaker who brings to her volunteer work the same energy, organization, and care that define her personal life. Her perspective as both a competitor and community member allows her to bridge tradition with the evolving needs of the Saddlebred world—honoring its heritage while helping to shape its future.

Erin's enduring connection to the American Saddlebred community reflects not only her achievements, but her belief in the power of horses to inspire excellence, foster connection, and bring joy to all who know and love them.
